Aleksa faces her adversary/ rescuer across dinner, hoping for an explanation for the chaos that has descended on her in the past three days.

I used the scene to plant some tiny teasers from her past, and a couple of little clues of things that will show up in the future.

Writing went very well, and I didn't actually want to stop. I want to find out how Ki is going to break his bombshell news to her, and I want to discover how she's going to take it.

At the moment, all I know is what the news IS… and I can hardly wait to see the fireworks.

So.

How's your writing coming.
