People have been asking me for T-shirts for ages. I kept trying to over-complicate the process, (trying to get names for the entire first HTTS graduating class to put on the shirt, for example).

The shirts just never got done.

Break to today. There are T-shirts. Limited-time only (there’s a reason, and I’ll get to it). They have the stunning logo Kirsten Bolda designed for me on them.

They’ll be available until Jan. 14th. TeeSpring has a little timer under the “Reserve Your Shirt” button to let you know how long you have left.

They come in multiple colors, in lots of sizes.

Here’s why I put them together today.

I have three painful areas on the right side of my tongue. I have to go in to see my doc on the 11th. Up to this point, every time I've pointed out a painful area on my tongue, it has proven to be dysplasia.

This might be the time that I go in and he says, “No, everything looks great.” I hope it is.

But I cannot plan my life on hope.

He told me on my last post-op checkup that we were not going to be able to do any more tissue removal in the office with just local anesthesia. If he had to cut anything else out, it was going to have to be done in a hospital, and it was going to require the use of a laser. And because I’m an adult about these things and he’s a good doc, he told me the laser was going to leave me in a lot of pain for a month rather than a week.

Hospitals, anesthesia, and lasers cost a lot more money than a numbing shot in the jaw and in-office surgery. Last year wasn’t great for me. And I have catastrophic insurance, which means I have to spend a LOT of money before the insurance kicks in.

So.

T-shirts. They might not be necessary. It would be wonderful if they weren’t.

But the great thing about T-shirts, hoodies, and baseball shirts is they’re still wearable (and cool) if I turn out to be just paranoid (albeit justifiably).

If you like the shirt, click the image, and use the dropdown menu to get the shirt you want.

And thanks. I hope this is just me finally delivering on the promise of T-shirts.
