The Theme Is Temporary

I've installed Spam Karma because I'm sick of moderating the fifty or so spam posts I'm getting every day. Spam Karma is not compatible with my homemade theme. I don't like the current theme, so I'll put a new one together shortly. For now, this keeps the weblog online.

Added later: Actually, after I put Spam Karma in and ran it, I found a couple thousand spams inserted as trackbacks into posts both old and new. Lovely. They are all gone now.

I'm testing themes briefly. Theme designers seem to love teeny-tiny print and low contrast. I prefer larger print and high contrast. This is a problem.
