

AND the Writing

By Holly Lisle

I'm back to actual work. I suspect by the time I've redone the proposal, which I'm working on today, all the WFH1 stuff should have gelled. By the time I've done the sixty-five thousand words of that over the next month, the HAWKSPAR material should be fully settled. In spite of various stresses, the words are starting to click again, and I'm regaining confidence.

Look for not much talk about anything but writing for a while, then.
