

Another Cadence Drake start pops up – 12,862 words

By Holly Lisle

I woke up at around five-ish this morning knowing the next chapter of The Wishbone Conspiracy, my next Cady Drake novel.

And thought about it for a while, and decided that I would write it once I got up and got showered. And am sitting down to do that.

But on my way to getting there, I just found ANOTHER incomplete Cady novel on my hard drive, written before I wrote Warpaint, but taking a completely different take on the vampire problem in Settled Space.

A lot of that problem was solved in Warpaint. But not all of it.

And I like what I've found here enough that it's worth saving, worth chasing down. It lets me bring back my favorite minor character from Hunting the Corrigan's Blood.

But not today.

Today... now... I'm writing on The Wishbone Conspiracy. Was not planning to be doing actual writing this quickly – I don't even have my Sentence cards completed.

But I figured out something really cool, and Chapter Two beckons.
