

Ohio #3: Net gain of 1079 words ... and quick notes about The Emerald Sun and the Moon & Sun series

By Holly Lisle

As always, I started out the morning by doing a quick read-through of what I got the day before, doing light edits (and sometimes removing stuff that does not work), and then rolling from there into writing the new scene.

I lost a chunk of words to having managed to say the same thing twice yesterday in different words – I kept the better version. Still ended up with a net gain of 1079, and I'll take it. It was a tougher-than-usual three hours, but it ended well.

Changing topics: THE MOON AND SUN SERIES

Years ago, I sold a three-book YA series to Scholastic – The Moon & Sun series. And wrote the first two novels, The Ruby Key and The Silver Door.

And then got the news that “the series isn't doing as well as we had hoped.” The series was cancelled, and I never wrote the third book.

There has been a bit of a discussion going on elsewhere in this blog about that series, and about the still-not-written Book Three (The Emerald Sun).

To bring that conversation into this decade, I did get back all rights to the first two books, and last year I started into Book Three.

However, I realized that I have no hope whatsoever of making back enough money on those books to pay me for the time it would take me to write the last one, edit and typeset all three, pay for the cover art for them, and republish them.

There weren't that many readers in the first place, all the folks who'd read them are now adults...

My problem is that I still want to finish the series.

And with the Ohio Novels – a world I love set in a place I love with characters I love, and that is in the popular Urban Fantasy genre – if the Ohio Novels are successful enough, maybe I could afford to write the third book of the Moon & Sun series and not have it pay me a working wage.

I figured this out last year, and put The Emerald Sun on hold, and started into the still unnamed Ohio series.

If the Ohio Novels sell well enough, I'll take a one month to finish the revision of the Cadence Drake novel The Wishbone Conspiracy, and another month to get it into print. And then I'll take six months to write The Emerald Sun, and over the next year, working on those three books after getting my day's words on the sixth Ohio Novel, I plan to bring out all three Moon & Sun novels in my own editions.

It won't be fast... and I'm sorry about that.

And if the Ohio Novels don't take off for me and start bringing in an income that will cover speculative projects, it won't happen at all.

But that's the chance I have, and I'm going to take it.

If you happen to be one of those folks who has been waiting forever for those those books, sign up in the form below to get my weekly updates. If and when I'm able to start into the Moon & Sun books, that's where you'll hear about it – and where you'll be able to get special private-list-member early-buyer prices.

When (if) I can afford to write and publish the Moon & Sun books, you'll find out first here. Sign up below.

Contents © Holly Lisle. <https://hollylisle.com> All Rights Reserved

Streamlining During Chaos: Fiction? YES.

By Holly Lisle

Nothing is yet cast in stone... but in about a week the full force of this particular Chaos Storm is going to hit. The Current Chaos™ is pretty close to becoming the Big Right On Top Of Me Chaos – a state that could last from a best case of one month to a worst case of maybe three.

(See me bravely ignoring the “Wanna bet on that worst case?” utterance from my Muse, who has ridden this train before.)

I can't accomplish everything I want to do and still do what I need to do. So I have put some things on hold for a while in order to accomplish anything.

My brain turns to fiction when things get rough, stressful, difficult. It always has – reading when I was a kid, writing when other people's worlds stopped being what I needed.

I won't complain. Being able to fall into fiction when things are hard is a Big Damn Advantage when you're a novelist. I've decided this time to play to my strengths, and to NOT try to do everything.

So from today until we're out the other side of this, my writing is going to be exclusively fiction.

Objectives:

- WRITE: Complete the first novel in The Ohio Series and get it into its month of cool down. (I'm only a couple chapters from the end, so this is a small goal.)
- REVISE: Finish the write-in and type-in revisions of Dead Man's Party and get it out to beta readers. (I'm most of the way through the write-in revision, but still have a significant type-in ahead of me, and I do a LOT of on-the-spot revision and adding things during type-in, so this is a BIG goal.)
- OUTLINE AND WRITE: The Emerald Sun first draft. (And this is a big goal, too.)

I'll do a worksheet or two for the podcast as we need them.

I will NOT be starting into the Canary Revision of How to Revise Your Novel. until after I'm through the biggest part of the coming mess.

My plan had been to pick that up on Monday and do it as an after-fiction thing. At this point, by best-case scenario moves that to early September.

Absolute worst case, the first part of next year. (Never start a massive project in December.)

Get Holly's Free Fiction Sampler, plus Weekly Fiction Updates

Contents © Holly Lisle. <https://hollylisle.com> All Rights Reserved

Dead Man's Party: Wrote the SERIES ending...

By Holly Lisle

DEAD MAN'S PARTY

Last week I wrote a stand-alone ending for Dead Man's Party.

This week, because I had one week and one chapter left, I wrote a series ending, and showed how I built out pieces of story that do not exist in the first draft, but that, if I decide I want Dead Man's Party to be the first book in a series – (all perhaps with titles of songs by Oingo Boingo...) – I could do that.

The writing went well, and now the novel, completely finished in first draft whether I want to write it as a stand-alone one-off or as a series, gets a 30-day (or slightly more) breather before I head into revising it.

Which means Monday is now an open fiction writing day.

Wednesdays through Fridays are all The Ohio Series, Book One.

Tuesday is going to stay Marketing Tuesday. I need it. A lot.

Monday, though...

THE EMERALD SUN

Starting next Monday, I'm rereading and annotating Moon & Sun – both The Ruby Key and The Silver Door, and out of them pulling the characters, worldbuilding, and conflicts I need to resolve in book three, which WON'T be called The Emerald Sun, but which I'll be calling that for now, until I've finished the first draft.

Once I have that done, I'll start writing M&S III on Mondays. It won't be finished terribly quickly. But this way, it will finally get done.

HOW TO WRITE A NOVEL

The completion of my demo novel ALSO finishes the writing portions of my How to Write a Novel class.

This week I'll be building Lesson 38, in which I show folks who have finished their first novel how to streamline and adapt the processes in the course into their own personal, flexible, reusable novel-writing system.

And then I'll be building the Class Bonus. Still three days left to go on the vote on that, and there are still some folks who have not voted.

And the voting for the top few possibilities is CLOSE.

I'll be building a lot of the other suggestions as inexpensive paid workshops or little classes. Not all. But there were a lot of really good ideas folks came up with in suggesting what they wanted as their included bonus, and I think a lot of other folks might find them helpful, too.

Not going to say anything that might influence the voting (like hinting what the leaders are at the moment).

HOWEVER... This is everything on the ballot

- How to brainstorm and create bonus stories to promote a novel or series
- My personal Getting Shit Done daily writing system, in detail
- Behind the Scenes: DMP and the No One True Way novel-writing process
- 25 Alternative Idea-Generating Methods for Novels

- How to Resurrect and Complete Your Hard Drive Zombies (So They Stop Eating Your Braaaaaainz)
- How to Turn a Stand-Alone Novel into a Series
- Tutorial: Getting Your Novel Into Print
- The Conflict Resource: The Who, What, When, Where, Why, and How of Great Conflict
- Interweaving Multiple Story Threads in Big, Complex Novels
- Alternatives to and Adaptations for the Provisional Outline

And these were the five suggestions that were more broadly applicable that I kept off the ballot. I will probably do them as stand-alones.

- How to Find Your Home Genre
- Writing at Production Pace
- How to Work Around POV Limitations
- How to Foreshadow and Misdirect in Fiction

And this thing I think I'll just do as a freebie for everyone:

- My Favorite Writing Tools, Services, and Stuff

Contents © Holly Lisle. <https://hollylisle.com> All Rights Reserved

The Ohio Series, Book One, and The Emerald Sun planning

By Holly Lisle

I've spent the weekend and the last couple of days trying to figure out my writing schedule. I ran out of The Wishbone

Conspiracy before I planned too, and that has to sit in a corner being quiet for a month, resting and getting cold so I can get an objective look at it when I do the revision.

I have not had time to read through and build out the backstory details for The Emerald Sun, because I've been simultaneously writing first drafts of two novels plus the biggest writing class I've ever done. How to Write a Novel, of which I'm starting Lesson 35 as soon as I do this post.

So I had writing time today, and nothing I'd planned to write that I COULD write. Because of that, I started the first book of what is NOT going to be called The Ohio Series, but which is going to be set in Ohio.

And to my amazement, the novel started in a condo in South Florida with a young woman who, when an old dude showed up to tell her that her grandmother had left her a house, and who countered with, "I never had any grandmothers."

And got weirder from there. By the end of the first scene, magic had happened, and I was hooked.

Got 1834 words by the time I finally pulled myself away. Not as many as my goal when I set up a stock template for 70,000-word novels last week, but way more than I'd expected to get starting cold.

On now to HTWAN Lesson 35: Writing Endings with Multiple Antagonists and Multiple Climaxes. Or what I call Playing on Hard Mode.

Oh, yes. Over the next several weekends, I will be reading and noting and worldbuilding from the first two books in the Moon & Sun series to get the voice of the protagonist back, and to plan out the final story. At the point where I finish the first draft of Dead Man's Party, which will be in three more weeks, I'll be ready to start writing The Emerald Sun, which I'm considering changing to The Emerald Sky.

And I'll have a space in my schedule ready-made for it. It can, as suggested by my daughter while we were working together today, become my next Monday novel.

Contents © Holly Lisle. <https://hollylisle.com> All Rights Reserved

The Wishbone Conspiracy: 2027 words, and a Change in the 3-Novels Experiment

By Holly Lisle

Got pretty decent words today on The Wishbone Conspiracy. 2027 new words, taking me to a total of 23,873 words in the novel.

I mostly like what I got, though I had a bit of a hard start.

And that's what I want to talk about today.

The "Write on three different novels each week" experiment worked very well. Until it didn't.

I was writing first draft of Dead Man's Party on Mondays, first draft of Moon & Sun: The Emerald Sun on Tuesdays and Wednesdays, and first draft of Cadence Drake: The Wishbone Conspiracy on Thursdays and Fridays.

Getting 1515 words or better on Mondays, about 1500 words on Tuesdays and Wednesdays, and 2000-ish words on Thursdays and Fridays.

BUT...

It required a big mental shift, and rolling through three very different projects back to back to back started taking a toll on me.

I kept going... but then I started research in improving the marketing I've done – or in many cases haven't done – on my work, and current methods of increasing Amazon sales, and experimenting with copywriting and cover design and split testing and...

Along with writing the three novels, and writing a new lesson every week in my new How to Write a Novel class, and answering student questions, and working with Dan on getting the final pieces of the HollysWritingClasses.com website out of beta, plus spending time with my family...

Well, the fiction broke down just a little. And I hit what I have come to recognize as the “trying to do too much at once” wall.

Dead Man's Party has to stay. It's my demonstration novel for How to Write a Novel.

My writing on The Wishbone Conspiracy is still running smoothly.

But the writing on The Emerald Sun hit a wall.

This is a book I need to be able to throw myself into exclusively: to NOT be writing other fiction at the same time. It has a specific voice and some specific worldbuilding and a place it's going that is very different from other things I write. It has a deep world that I have not been writing in recently, characters who have become strangers to me, and both Tuesday and yesterday, my mind simply balked. Refused to work on Emerald Sun.

Was real damn happy to offer up copywriting, cover design, threw ideas at me for both The Wishbone Conspiracy and Dead Man's Party.

But it dug in its heels on what was supposed to have been the work of the day.

Had all my fiction crashed on me, I would be taking a different approach than the one I'm taking starting today, but two of three books – the one with NO previous worldbuilding, and the one with a ton of worldbuilding, but in which I've been writing regularly for the last eight or so years – are still fine.

So now I enter Phase Two of the experiment.

This is pretty simple. Monday will still be Dead Man's Party, and still 1515 words or thereabouts each week, followed by working on HTWAN, answering questions in the forum, doing the help desk tickets that require me, working with my moderators, working with Dan on the site, answering emails, and other daily task.

With Dead Man's Party, I have to have this amount, and JUST this amount, for my class and to make sure I'm applying the material from the various lessons as I write. So I can't just write ahead and be done with this particular novel. Each chapter has to be written along with each lesson.

Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, I'm going to be shooting for 2000 words per day on The Wishbone Conspiracy.

That will give me six-thousand first-draft words on that book each week.

I currently have 23,873 words total, and with a 90,000-word target for completion of the first draft, need another 66,000 words (rounded) to hit my target.

So some book math. At 6000 words per week, I'll have the first draft finished in about eleven weeks. Figure I'll have it done around May 17th.

This is nobody's fastest pace on a novel ever, and if it were the only thing I was doing, I could get it done a lot faster. But it isn't, and what I'm looking for at this point is...

SUSTAINABLE FICTION CREATION.

A system that I can put into action and stick with, that will allow me to maintain my nonfiction work while creating regular publishable new fiction.

Now...

Those of you who didn't get sidetracked by the book math are going, "WAIT A MINUTE!!! What about Tuesday?"

Very good.

Tuesday, my first two to three hours will be focused on marketing my current backlist and learning how to do a better job of launching my front list.

It will also give me a clean break between Fiction Project One and Fiction Project Two.

And it will carry me to the completion of Fiction Project One AND Fiction Project Two at about the point where I also have the class How to Write a Novel completed in the Splinters version.

At that point, I'll have two finished novels in need of revision, editing, covers, marketing, bug hunting, launching, and publication.

And at that point, I'll figure out what happens next. I'll probably dive all the way into The Emerald Sun at that point.

And look at possible new writing classes or workshops I could create.

But as always...

This plan is subject to revision as I experiment and figure out new definitions for what I want to accomplish, and new ways to accomplish my objectives.

Contents © Holly Lisle. <https://hollylisle.com> All Rights Reserved

The Emerald Sun: Lost some time to the world

By Holly Lisle

I got 879 words today – not the 1500 I'd planned.

But Genna found herself at the end of the world, and it took me a while to figure out how to get that part of the scene right.

The dragon and his many voices has rejoined the party, and the cat had a terrible scare.

I love what I got.

It simply took me much more time than I'd hoped to get it.

Tomorrow, maybe I'll be able to make better progress.

The Emerald Sun: When in doubt... CLIFF

By Holly Lisle

The scene I'd had outlined to write today looked boring in the light of dawn. So I looked at the NEXT scene I was going to write, and asked myself, "What is the most interesting way I could get myself to that scene...

And discovered that Genna was going to find a cliff.

Not just any cliff – though. She's currently leading her handful of allies toward something she as the future Sunrider can feel, can sense. She doesn't know what it is, but she knows she has to get there, that whatever she finds there is going to help her become the Sunrider.

And she just got there... and saw a boulder float into the air.

Tomorrow (in the next scene and in the next chapter) she and I will find out WHY.

1558 words written today, so just a few more than I needed to hit my target. And I'm very happy with what I got.

The Emerald Sun: Banris the Flea wins a battle

By Holly Lisle

Genna, the cat, Doyati, Yarri, and Dan are in the right place at the right time to see a human army winning their war against Banris... until they aren't.

I had to spend about half an hour setting up my Scrivener file for the new deadlines and writing objectives I'm now working toward – more on that another time.

But with my new deadlines set, my document set up to allow me to make the best use of my time, and my ten-minute timer going, I got 1604 words on the story today, and ended up with a nice realization about the current conflict, and how it will play into what's coming.

And the cat was busy in this scene, though he manages to make himself scarce right at the end.

Contents © Holly Lisle. <https://hollylisle.com> All Rights Reserved

The Emerald Sun: Chasing the unknown

By Holly Lisle

Today was a tougher day from the storytelling perspective.

I don't actually know what Genna and Dan and Yarri and Doyati and the cat are going to find.

They're running west, and something is waiting, and because of the way my Muse works, I'm going to see it when they see it, and not before.

We're not there yet – but they're not having an easy time, and are having to stay hidden because they have trouble behind them, and trouble in front of them.

I got 897 words today, and I know next Tuesday, when I pick this back up, they and I are going to go over that last hill and discover what's on the other side.

Contents © Holly Lisle. <https://hollylisle.com> All Rights Reserved

The Emerald Sun: In the hills before trouble

By Holly Lisle

Got 1017 words on The Emerald Sun today, my best day so far.

Genna had a revelation just a few minutes ago – she got herself and the other kids out of danger just in the nick of time... but danger is following along in their wake, and danger is waiting ahead.

And that's where I ran out of time in the writing, because now I have to move on to How to Write a Novel, Lesson 25.

The fact that my Muse does this to me regularly – running me up to a cliffhanger right at the point where I have to stop – is both kind of mean, and kind of helpful.

Because I really want to know what it is that she just figured out that she was getting ready to tell me. And I'll be eager to show up and get my words tomorrow morning so I can find out.

Onward.

Contents © Holly Lisle. <https://hollylisle.com> All Rights Reserved