

Content for the 5 Free Live Writing Chats

By Holly Lisle

I now have the 5 Free Live Writing Chats set up in my calendar, and have each chat broken out according to content.

This way, if you have specific questions, you can plan accordingly.

You can use this link to join the chat series at any time. (Link opens in new tab)

You'll receive notifications for the live chats, and I'm pretty sure you'll receive notifications for the replays if you've missed anything. (BRAND NEW SOFTWARE, I'm still learning it, so we have the potential for a certain amount of...ah...excitement.)

If I run out of time before I've covered questions from the material, any topic I miss will drop into Webinar 6.

Surprise!

By Holly Lisle

NOTE: I'm not a Christian, and this is Christian—it's also beautiful, and wonderful. Enjoy—and Merry Christmas.

Sent to me by Amy Kuhns, and definitely good enough to pass on.

How to write a novel

By Holly Lisle

Oh, ggod. I wish I hadn't heard wannabee writers say every single one of the things you'll hear here.

Thanks to Jim Woosley, who sent the link.

(For the queasiness, too, dude.)

Stuck

By Holly Lisle

I hit a wall yesterday on THE SILVER DOOR. I'm in the process of getting unstuck.

You can watch me getting unstuck (using Inspiration) here:
