

Closing on the Revision Ending

Spent yesterday dog-sick and mostly asleep on the couch. Today, I'm much better. I'm well into the revisions on Night Echoes, and I figure I have a few more days of hard work to take it to the finish. My biggest focus right now is coming up with a more satisfying last few lines; if I don't get those in the first draft, I spend a lot of time while I'm revising looking for the right point in the body of the story to come back to and resolve at the very end. I have a couple of candidates right now, but I'm still not there. The cat currently has the last words, but I'm not pleased with any of them. (No, the cat doesn't speak. But the last words are devoted to him.)

Onward.
