

Didn't Break EVERYthing

By Holly Lisle

I switched over to WordPress 2.01 this morning while I was on the phone with my son. (If it's 4:30 am his time, he remembers to call.)

The site seems to be working correctly, although the RSS feed on the front page of the site is now carrying comments instead of articles. I'm going to have to troop through the code and see what's up with that.

I did not finish any of what I wanted to get done yesterday. However, I did complete what I had to finish—those three deceptively simple questions in I See You. Yeah. My entire workday went down the drain on those puppies. But I got the thing in the mail in time, and it didn't cost me a forty+ dollar overnight shipping fee, either.

Today, I'm going to have to sit down and figure out an honest-to-God work schedule. I've discovered that, much as I'd like to be, I'm not a winging-it kind of writer, and I'm into February already, with less done than I want.

That line from Romancing the Stone: "There are esschedules to be maintained ... even in Columbia." I like that line. It speaks to me.

Contents © Holly Lisle. <https://hollylisle.com> All Rights Reserved