I got pure dialogue tonight, as Aleksa turned down the marriage proposal of the man who loves her. And while they were talking, I planted the seeds that are going to explode into disaster a few chapters down the road (stuff I've already written for the second part of the novel).

I like what I got here.

Still sick. Today was the worst day so far, but going by Matt, I should be at the halfway mark on this, or maybe more. Expecting to start feeling better soon.

So.

How did your words go?
