I'm pleased. I got up sometime before six a.m. and by noon I'd finished the first 108 pages of the Midnight Rain type-in, which includes reading the manuscript again word-for-word, paging along in the hardcopy manuscript, and paging along in the notes to make sure I don't overlook any of the Great Ideas™ that I had while doing the read-through. I'm not into the 'write whole new chapters' section of the manuscript yet, so I will not be able to keep this pace throughout the book, but this section required significant revision in some sections, including having to figure out and write a brand new villain intro. So for a first day, I'm pretty happy.
