When I rolled over 60,000 words yesterday, I also turned over 300 pages. So I'm right on target with my 200 words/page estimates.

It's silly, I know, but I like it when my numbers add up. It makes all my project completion math feel worthwhile, and gives me a feeling of stability. The numbers add up, which means the project really can be completed in first draft by x date.
