Right. Some words. Not as many words as I needed, and not words in which I have any faith. I need conflict between the two main characters, and also sparks, and though I had some of those back when the damned thing was rolling, at the moment I seem to have ...

Well, not conflict. Not sparks. I have something, dammit. I have whole friggin' pages of something.

Perhaps the problem is that I'm transitting, in a situation where how my heroes get to where they're going contains essential ingredients of the resolution of the book. Talyn gets both Part A and Part B of the actual solution to this thing from this trip. But she doesn't yet realize what she's discovered, and in consequence the trip reads like ... well, driving. On horseback, with magic, with an army on her tail. But still ... just ... driving.
