

Hak bas gokmat!

By Holly Lisle

The language of the Sun Wizards is adding a bit of low comedy to the story. That particular phrase has giving Genna and her best friend Catri a nasty wake-up call—and sends them hurtling into an adventure with the silver door.

And they've found a sort of newspaper, one about as scary as anything they've had happen to them to this point. I'm writing that bit, and more with the silver door today.

I've liked the words I've gotten the past few days, but haven't managed to get over the 1000-words-per-day mark. Today I'm shooting for the full 2000.

Will post the Friday snippet later—today is a full-schedule sort of day, and I'm going to have to dig through the hard drive, and then format the thing.
