

Huh ... I didn't know that

By Holly Lisle

I just discovered that Pete is the kind of guy who places the bills on the kitchen table at an exact 90 degree angle from the wall, that he stores his CD's alpha by artist, then alpha by album title, and that he sectioned off his pantry so that cereals and baking goods were not mixed in with canned goods.

Interesting what you find out about people when you drop in on them in a little novel cut-scene. This is all throw-away stuff now, but I suddenly realized how important that little tidbit is going to be a book down the line from this one.

I love writing.
