

Needed a short break

By Holly Lisle

Made my fifty pages last night, and am plugging through the next batch today at about equal pace (in other words, looks like another loooooong day), and after pages and pages of my freakin' scrawls, and with pages yet to go until I get back to lighter revisions, I needed to see type again. So I figured I'd post my progress (good) and my impressions of the revision (I'm going to have to go back in and add more magic in a couple of places before I send this off), and note that, thanks to Capsazin HP ointment, which is made with the same ingredient that makes pepper spray such a great weapon, my back is doing better today.

Hope y'all are having a good day.
