So here are the four choices I've so far come up with.

REMARKABLY SUCCESSFUL
A back-of-the-cover quote on my second novel, Bones of the Past, from publisher Jim Baen about my first novel, Fire in the Mist, which won the Compton Crook, sold well beyond anyone's expectations, and stayed in print continuously for about ten years. I've always liked the combination of surprise and pleasure indicated in those two little words. The fact that anyone can make a living in this business for any length of time makes him or her remarkably successful.

EXUBERANT TENACITY
I make my living and support my family writing books. And only writing books. This is how I do it. 'Nuff said.

DAMN LUCKY
What I think most mornings when I sit down to work.

POCKET FULL OF WORDS
A writerish sort of title. Kind of pretty.

Comments are welcome, votes will be considered but also non-binding. (Meaning when I figure out which one I like the best, I'm going to use that one, but comments and votes may help me figure out which one I like the best.
