

Not Going Well

By Holly Lisle

I could blame it on stress and pressure. Maybe I should, but I've worked under stress and pressure before, and I haven't ended up flailing like this.

I got about 700 new words on the proposal, most of which I think I may be able to keep. If that sounds uncertain, it is. I'm miserably lost. I keep thinking I see my way through, and then I don't. I've pulled out every trick I know to get this done, and nothing is working.

Going to stop for a while, give the brain a rest, try to let the subconscious toss me a bone or two. I'll come back at this later, and hope something starts falling into place soon.
