

Oh, BOY! Good, good, writing day today.

So... this morning I got my favorite line so far in the Ohio #2 novel.

It's subject to change during revision, of course, or outright deletion if I come up with something better, but right now it's this.

If you can catch them, you can eat them.

Can't throw in the context, except to note that an attempt at nasty negotiations by the bad guys did not work out as well as they'd hoped.

And I got a full start-to-finish scene I love, words I'm very happy with, I went over my stay-on-deadline wordcount of 1191 words by 479 words – and I still have time left over to get the rest of today's work done.

It has so far been pretty much the perfect Friday.
