

On Comments, Rants, and the Blog Itself

By Holly Lisle

I'll just keep doing what I've been doing where comments are concerned. They're disabled by default – I'll enable them where I want to offer them. People have been quite decent in their posting, and I like hearing from you.

Rants – well, I'm trying to steer myself more toward observations, and less toward rants. Haven't decided yet whether I'll keep the ones I've moved off-limits. They'll hang in limbo until I do.

The blog itself – got a couple of worried e-mails from readers hoping I wouldn't just shut it down entirely. I like blogging. As long as I'm not interfering with my paid work by doing it, I'll stay with it. Because frequently it helps me figure out how I need to get where I want to go – and reading through old entries reminds me that, no matter how much the current trainwreck feels like all new territory, odds are, I've been there before ... wherever “there” might happen to be.

Thank for the feedback when I asked the question previously. It helped.

Contents © Holly Lisle. <https://hollylisle.com> All Rights Reserved