It's taken me all morning to get here. I'll probably have lunch and then get back to this – I need to get the thing finished. Copyedits of TALYN are going to be landing on my doorstep in just a day or two, and I have to finish them on a tight deadline when they get here – and it's a big, big book. Meanwhile, Claire is waiting for this.

And I still have to get back to RIKNIR, of which I have written distressingly little, and which has its deadline closing in, too. (And which Matt has called the worst-titled book in the world. I suspect he's right. Well, it'll do for a working title.)

I'm in dire need of writing wings.
