

Rare for a while

The Christmas season and all of its attendant hoopla have landed with a reverberant thunk at my house. With an astonishing number of things to do, and no where near enough time to do them, I have to make time where I can. So I'll be hard to find here for the next few weeks. I'll post as I can, but won't be back regularly until after the first of the year.

I hope your season progresses happily, and that you can be with those you love and those who love you.
