

Rats and Turtles

By Holly Lisle

My oldest kid's life just took one of those nasty turns that hit all of us. She has to (quickly) find homes for a pet hairless rat who doesn't have much longer to live (he/she has a tumor), and for three large painted turtles in an aquarium. I know the rat comes with its cage, and with food. I believe that the turtles come with their aquarium, and with food.

If you live in the Fort Lauderdale area and would be willing to provide a few months' hospice for a dying rat, or would like to own three cool turtles, please contact me, and I'll put you in touch with my daughter.

Thank you for even considering this.
