Recommending a Search Engine

written by Holly
November 5, 2005
By Holly Lisle

I've discovered Clusty — very fast, does not track you as you use it, is not plagued by endless advertising, seems to have respect for copyright, returns good results. Clean interface, some nice add-on features.

I'm comfortable recommending it in place of search engines that do not have those features or that do not respect your privacy.