

Rethinking the outline

By Holly Lisle

As I noted yesterday, I've diverged from the outline significantly, using good bits that were planned for later. So my job today is to think up new good bits and rework the outline. I may or may not get my 2000 words for the day, but the framework for upcoming chapters has become too unstable to just keep running with what I have. Time to dig out the foundation and put in a new footer.
