

Review of “Light Through Fog”

By Holly Lisle

I wrote the short story “Light Through Fog” for the collection The Mammoth Book of Paranormal Romance because I needed a live project to demonstrate my techniques in the How To Think Sideways course, and I had to have the pressure of writing something that was commissioned, had a hard (and very close) deadline, and that the editor could reject.

Story went well, the editor accepted it and liked it so much she requested another for her next collection (this one I’m doing because the first one was fun in spite of the pressure)... and my daughter found a review of “Light Through Fog”, and sent me the link, which I’m passing on to you.
