

Revised Ohio 2 through page 369 – and very happy with my progress.

Today was one of the weirder parts of Book 2, and it's been a while since I've seen it. I was afraid it might not hold up.

But it did. I found myself laughing in the right places, and getting choked up in the right places, and while there were some story issues I had to fix, this section was overall pretty clean.

Tomorrow, I'll pick up on manuscript page 369 with Chapter 23, and I should be able to finish most of the rest of the write-in revision. If not all of it.

The last page of this manuscript is page 431.

That's less than a hundred pages of write-in – should be doable if everything else goes smoothly.

It would be pretty cool to have the type-in revision finished this week. I'd then be able to start fresh on the read-through of Book 3 on Monday.

I'll see how it goes.
