

Settling in for the new day

By Holly Lisle

I have a couple of potentially cool scenes to write today – the first in which the main heroes step into a new world for the first time, and the second in which old gods invade a small North Carolina town looking for trouble. Need to find the conflict point in the first before I hit it – the second I just need to figure out the focus for.

Still, today's writing gig has the potential to be a lot of fun.
