

Since last I posted...

By Holly Lisle

Since last I posted, which I have just realized has been more than a month ago, Dan Allen (my website guy) and his team and I have done massive work on HollysWritingClasses.com, I relaunched How to Revise Your Novel, we had the Cat 4 walk-by of Hurricane Matthew, and I turned 56.

I've been swamped, but it hasn't been swamped with recovering from Yet Another Surgery, so that's a big plus. It has been swamped with Making the Money to Pay the Bills from three major surgeries in six months, though, so I still can't say it's been entirely ... fun.

No. Definitely not entirely fun.

But one of my writing students asked about the viability of a novel with a human female protagonist and a dragon love interest.

I figured I'd ask you guys what you thought.

But I ALSO thought, I wrote a song for that.

So that's back. I'm both voice and guitar. I'll apologize some other time.

This song, by the way, is featured in my novel Minerva Wakes, which I'm finally almost ready to reprint.
