

So Here's the Deal

Having figured out that I could post snippets and still keep them private, (important from a contractual perspective), I then discovered that the other weblog software wouldn't let me have both private and public categories.

Hence – and I know this is a pain in the ass for those of you who have registered on the previous software – the new software.

I still don't know if I'll ever enable comments. But I will start posting bits that I like from works in progress, and if you're interested, registering as a member of the weblog will let you read them. And still keep my editors and publishers happy, since these bits and pieces won't be open-access, and therefore technically published.

Win-win.
