I forgot—just flat-out forgot—one huge source of receipts: Stuff I bought via the internet, and for which I received internet receipts. All the other stuff is done, but I'm now going through right at 2000 messages in three separate accounts, looking for everything I spent via the web and dragging them all into their own little folder, and printing them off. Guess what I'll be much more organized with this year?

As for what I'm doing next? I have to spend a few days rewriting chapters two and three of the GREEN MAGIC proposal so I can resubmit it to an editor who loved the first chapter and wants to see more of that throughout the rest of the book.

Then ... Plot Clinic.
