

The Candy Protest Link

The link was screwing up the candy protest poll viewing link, so I had to pull it. This is the story that incited my disbelief.

My vote? Five on a scale of five. No small child has ever been so stupid that he would make the unconscious leap from eating barely discernable gummy candy figures with running over animals in a car he won't get for years, for fun. The kids who do hurt small animals for fun don't do it because their parents gave them candy. With or without tire marks. Life requires assessing priorities. This ain't one.

And since this became a rant instead of a poll (with the wording and all, it was never unbiased anyway, so it was more of rant AS poll), I've pulled the poll from the front page. Will put up something new and unbiased later.
