This is old news by now, and I wasn't even going to mention it, except I realize that a lot of my readers know the story, know that the bastard never paid for his crimes against my two older kids in spite of confessing much of what he did to them, and that these readers and friends would probably appreciate some closure.

So.

The child-molester ex is the only creature in my entire life I wanted dead. Now he's dead, and he suffered a lot getting there, and I'm glad of both things.

He doesn't get the dignity of being named here (and if anyone knows his name and mentions it, I'll delete the post). He doesn't deserve to be remembered as a human being. He wasn't one.

He was scum, and now he's rotting scum, and the world is a better place because he's stopped breathing the air the rest of us breathe.
