

The Indie Authors' Advent Calendar? Brilliant!

By Holly Lisle

I think both readers and writers will find this a simply brilliant idea.

A group of writers has banded together to create a series fiction advent calendar. Each of the writers has done a series story, and different parts of it will be posted throughout the advent season.

You go to the calendar, click the links as they become available, and read the part of each story as it goes live.

It's fun for readers, who get to read stories by writers they might not know yet. It's great for the writers, who have a chance to connect with folks who might not have found them yet.

And...

...It's just so cool! Make sure when you go that you sign up for the notices. (The link is at the top right corner of the page.) You'll get one email each day with the link for that day's story section.
