

Things you trip over

I was searching backlinks and broken links tonight because I'm trying to get the site all the way back to fully functional.

And while I'm not entirely sure how I got here, I found a thoughtful, in-depth article about my site and me by William Bell.

He never contacted me about having written it, didn't ask for an interview or request a backlink, and if I hadn't been doing the sitework I'm doing, I would never have found it. But it's a good article.

He's written a lot of good articles. Take a look at his site. His interests are varied, his writing is good, and he's put a lot of care and passion into what he's created.
