I have most of the site set up now and I'm working out bugs. I've finished the first lesson, which is, because it's hugely important and covers so much ground, longer than most of my planned lessons. I'm excited. Everything is coming together pretty smoothly, which is always a nice surprise, though I'm not holding my breath for it to stay that way. I'm getting ready now to install forum software in the Think Sideways site (which we may or may not use, but which I want to have available), and then I'm going to put together site navigation.
