I'm at 3687 words.

And right at the midpoint, I came up with a better way to do the story, which is going to require significant rewriting. Probably on Sunday night. Something my main character found out in scene three now has to be transferred to scene four, which is going to cause some word loss. But that's okay, because I'm running kind of long anyway.

And, I did a quick video on how I use Scrivener, because someone asked me for one, and I'm using it today—recording didn't take all that much time.

It's uploading now, and I'll post it during my next stretch break.
