Paper Testing ROUND 2

I'll be gone next week for another tongue biopsy/surgery (not sure how much he's going to need to do, but the recovery for both is the same).

After that, I'll set up the next paper tests. Parts of the site design look pretty close to ready. Parts of the site have proved to me that paper testing is the best thing since controllable fire.

When I'm done with ROUND 2, which people who did not sign up for ROUND ONE will be eligible for, I think I will for the first time ever have a site that is genuinely easy to use.

I only managed to get 1 person through the original paper test. It proved useful, however, because she conveyed a palpable sense of being underwhelmed by what was there.

So I rebuilt the entire front end of the paper test.

I'm now ready for volunteers for the new paper-test sessions.

Before you volunteer, please go to the ZOOM site to make sure the software will work for you.

You can use either the web login or login via free software the company provides. I've used both, and it's very good.

But if it doesn't work for you, don't sign up. This is the only option I'm going to have for paper testing in the first round.

If it does work for you, go to the sign-up sheet:

Instructions are on the sign-up sheet,

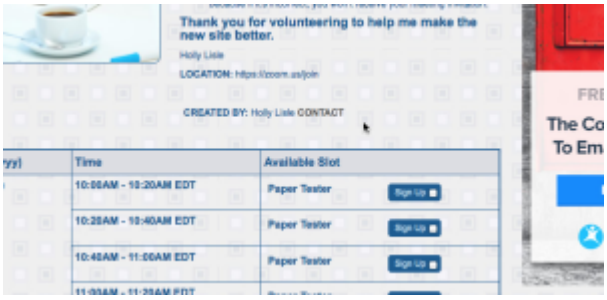

but I'm going to add a couple of important additional points here.

Pick any of the times and days that will work for you. Plan on coming to the meeting right on time. I've built in some padding to let us get your screen set up and make sure your sound is working.

By the way, you'll need a decent mic, whether built-in or stand-alone.

You do NOT need a webcam. You can use one, and I'll be glad to see you when I talk to you, but if you don't want to do this, that's fin.

When you sign up, PLEASE SEND ME AN EMAIL from CONTACT link show in the image below:

I'll need to send you the meeting link for the software we'll be using so you can join the meeting.

And thank you very much for volunteering. I have a much more professional system in place this time. If it works smoothly, this is going to be our new live chat system.
