

Tylenol and aspirin have kicked in

By Holly Lisle

The sinus headache is over the other eye today. I've been waiting for the pain to become tolerable – I think I've reached "as good as it gets." So, time to get to work. I finished with the proposal last night. I'm going to start with it today, working through until I have a sizable chunk done. I'm going to give myself two hours. Then on to the book, and 2500 words.

The reason for the change – it's easier to do revision than first draft, and with my head hurting, I'll go with the easiest work first, and hope the Tylenol Sinus, which Matt is out picking up for me, will do the trick by the time I'm ready for the tougher stuff.

I hate headaches.
