

Unsticking a stuck story

By Holly Lisle

Had to quit last night when I was too tired to think my way out of an unnecessary stupidity Molly committed in the first version of the book. Today, I sat down, did four lines of a timed writing, including a couple of sentence fragments, and the idea for the fix slammed me between the eyes.

So I'm flying again. Will probably be working on this most of the night, but I'm getting there. I had hoped to be done last Tuesday, but I'll finish in the next couple of days, and that will be fine, too. I love the way this revision is going.
