

Writing Today

By Holly Lisle

Need to work on HAWKSPAR. The past three days have cost me just under 9000 words. My start point today is 132,034, and my goal is 135,034 or better. Better would be good.

I had to switch the template on the diary – the other one looked all right but trashed essential portions of the software function. With this template, everything works, and I do have it fixed far enough that you can still navigate to the rest of the site (links are on the top and the bottom). But it's ugly. I'm sorry for that. It's probably going to be ugly for a while, though. Now that the security holes are patched and everything is working, and I don't have anything that would be keeping me from writing anyway, I'm going to get back to work.
