I've finally caught my breath on one of the wilder February/March combos I've been through.

So now it's time for me to catch up on a couple of things that have been left hanging.

Writers' One-Step Website Software. THAT's a big YES.

First, Dan's and my question about whether anyone besides me wanted a one-step writer website was a resounding YES.

So here's the deal:

If you get on the BETA list and let us know what you want, take a few questionnaires that will let us figure out what needs to be designed and built first, later, and not at all, and/or participate in the beta testing, and when we have the various parts of this ready to go live, you'll have the opportunity to get early-adopter discounts.

Some of these will be time-limited, some will be limited by number, some will be both, so you'll need to act fast—but you'll have plenty of notice beforehand.
