I finished WFH1 yesterday at about 3:30 PM, with 3125 words, both done and total. I like what I got, and it is fun writing. It's very freeing to be somebody else for a while.

Moved on to the LGD proofs, and got through chapter two with three mistakes found and corrected, and one so bizarre I have to look in up in the hopes that I'll be able to figure out what it was supposed to be. (This was either a compositing error or a serious brain fart on my end.)

The kid is hanging out in his room most of the time – he got sucked into the George R.R. Martin ICE AND FIRE series, and is tearing through book two with a poleaxed expression on his face. Saw the same expression on Matt's face when he was reading them. Me – I crashed and burned when the kid went off the side of the building, a few pages into book one, and I may or may not be able to get back to them.

For those of you who, having read the SECRET TEXT trilogy, are pointing fingers and saying, "But you ... but you ... but you ...", I bow in frank admission of hypocrisy. What I write tends to be a hell of a lot darker than what I read. Not in all cases, but in many.
